This column usually makes a sordid attempt to crack wise occasionally, dish out dirt frequently, and fill space eternally. But for want of a better subject, topic, or what have you, this first issue of The Bachelor will be graced by a column purporting to hand out a bit of needy info for those newly-arrived neophytes, who are more than likely lacking in knowledge of the more or less atmospheric condition surrounding the campus.

It is for that reason that all upper-classmen—including that biological specimen, the sophomore—are asked to raise their hands, obtain permission, and leave the room while the class of 1936 is given the lowdown on what's what and why.

It might be well to mention first of all that Wabash College possesses a unique student barber shop, located at occasional intervals upon the chapel steps. Upon this sacred and hallowed spot has fallen many a hair which has been attacked viciously and vigorously by the official barber of the vigilance committee of the Senior Council. The barber selected this year is destined to take sheer delight in his task. Freshmen desiring de luxe haircuts at special rates may secure same by reading information on the large red placards which rumors inform us will make their 1932 debut upon the campus in very short order.

The Senior Council was founded in 1918 for the express purpose of rendering this special service to worthy freshmen of an assuming nature. The present council, founded in 1927, is practically the same as the original, although has of late stressed the necessity of learning Old Wabash and Alma Mater. There is a report circulated about the campus that the members of the council have taken a decided turn for the worse.

The Senior Council, however, gets along very well without advice from the newer classmen, and may be passed off with a smile, a straw, or a snicker. The latter is resorted to primarily in case of wet weather.

There is also a Pan-Hellenic Council hiding out somewhere on the campus, presumably working out a program for the Pan dance. Come around if you have any suggestions or if you think Guy Lombardo, Paul Whiteman, Isham Jones, Charley Agnew, Coon-Sanders or any of the other orchestras which are dickering for a chance to help out next spring are not up to caliber.

There are a few Wabash customs which are kept about the campus in old mason jars and senior cords and which might be looked into pretty well. Such things as pots, toques, senior benches, junior fences, sophomore rocks, and freshman seats (in the first front rows of the chapel) are occasionally mentioned and bantered about by those who are in a position to do such things.

Scarlet sweaters make a mighty nice appearance upon the campus, blending in appropriately with the verdant grass and probable junior jackets. It has been suggested that those who are not in the know refrain from wearing scarlet because of the heat. It's a good idea. High school buttons, pins, and other insignificant insignia may be placed away with

LITTLE GIANTS FACE FRANKLIN IN OPENER

Attention Freshmen!

According to a Senior Council ruling all freshman are required to attend chapel Monday morning wearing freshman pots which may be obtained at the local clothing stores. Attention is also called to the ruling prohibiting freshmen from smoking while on the campus.

COLLEGE REGISTRATION NORMAL AS HUNDRETH ACADEMIC YEAR OPENS

Freshman Class of Average Size Registers Tuesday—Upper Classes Drop

Unlike its larger fellows in the academic profession, Wabash college begins the year 1932-1933 with only a small, and considering the times, normal decrease in enrollment over the figures of last year.

Decrease Small

The class of incoming freshmen has proven to be of normal size, with approximately one hundred and forty new men registered. A slight decrease of about two percent in the upper classes was evident as the first day of registration closed, but the total decrease will not be over ten, it was predicted. Most remarkable is the normal freshman registration, when larger schools are finding a decrease in some cases as high as eight hundred in their enrollment of new men.

Registration Swift

Registration this year was carried out in a new and efficient system which was found to be easier and quicker for both those registering and for Professor Domroese's staff. Everything clicked smoothly, and the students were able to register at the rate of one a minute, a speed hitherto unattained by the registering force. Professor Domroese was assisted by four students helpers. They were Wm. C. Stephens, J. Jeffery Auer, D. Marcellus Jones, and Lorentz H. Adolfsen.

Changes in the schedules of students are being made at the registrar's office. All desiring to change their schedule must see Professor Domroese in his office. Students are warned that if they drop a course after the first four weeks, for other cause than withdrawal from school, they will be credited with a failure in that course.

COLLEGE RECEIVES NEW OBSERVATORY TELESCOPE

W. R. Jewell, of Danville, Ill., Makes Gift During Summer— Moved to New Location

The new college observatory and telescope, located on the Ben Hur property south of town, has attracted much of the interest of the students. The observatory, which is the gift of W. R. Jewell of Danville, Ill., was given to the college last June and moved to its present site during the latter part of the summer.

Sixteen Inch Lens

The observatory building houses a sixteen inch reflecting telescope, manufactured at the famous Brashers works in Philadelphia. It was purchased by Mr. Jewell twenty-eight years ago, and until its recent removal was mounted on Mr. Jewell's property in Danville. Through its lens Jewell probed the depths of the heavens, and from his

WELCOME

To those who tread our wooded campus for the first time, to whom our customs may seem strange, who have come from afar to taste of the fruits of knowledge and culture, first planted by Caleb Mills and Elihu Baldwin and nurtured throughout a century of Mid-Western education by a great host of scholars. Stamped indelibly upon the memory of Wabash men is the tale of struggle and hardship encountered by the first president of Wabash. About the name of Craggie, Grand Old Man of Wabash, there is a tradition mellowed by the years and living on. The cry of "we want blood" giving to the hosts of Wabash "the color they love so well"; the grim determined fight of a Wabash football team, inspiring Walter Sckersall to christen them the "Little Giants"—these and myriad others are the scenes that still live on and shall become the heritage of the future sons of Wabash. It is to such a school, with traditions builded by a hundred years of glorious past that we welcome you with a hearty Caveman greeting!

OLD WABASH

From the hills of Maine to the western plain, or where the cotton is blowing,
From the gloomy shade of the northern pine, to the light of the southern seas;
There's a name held dear and a color we cheer wherever we find it glowing
And the tears will rise to our longing eyes as it floats on the evening breeze.
When the day is done and the setting sun is painting in flashing glory,
Across the sky with its gorgeous dyes, the color we love so well,
We love to sit as the shadows flit, and praise it in song and story
We love to shout ere the light dies out a good old Wabash yell.

Refrain:

Our prayers are always thine, our voices and hearts combine
To sing thy praise when future days shall bring thy name before us
When college days are past, as long as life shall last,
Our greatest joy will be to shout the chorus.

Chorus:

Dear Old Wabash, thy loyal son shall ever love thee,
And o'er thy classic halls, the scarlet flag shall proudly flash
Long in our hearts we'll bear the sweetest memories of thee
Long shall we sing thy praises, Old Wabash.

And loud and long shall echo the song, 'till hill and valley are ringing,
And spread the fame of her honored name, wherever the breezes blow.
'Till sweet and clear the world shall hear the sons of Wabash singing,
And flying free the world shall see, the scarlet banner go.
The honors won by each loyal son, in highest rank shall instate her,
For evermore as in days of yore, their deeds be noble and grand;
Then once again, ye Wabash men, three cheers for Alma Mater,
What e'er befall, revered by all, may she unequalled stand.

Refrain and Chorus:

NOTICE

The annual all-college sing will be held next Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in front of the Chapel. Through the courtesy of Carroll Coffel, a free show has been scheduled for all Wabash men at 9:00 immediately following the sing.

Freshman Journalists

All freshman wishing to work on The Bachelor report at the office in the basement of Center Hall at 1:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, September 23. This work is open to all freshman regardless of previous experience. Old men please report also.

DR. W. N. BRIGANCE DIRECTS SUMMER SPEECH AT U. S. C.

Dr. Obed Johnson Teaches Courses at University of Utah During Summer Vacation

Dr. William Norwood Brigance, head of the department of speech, and Dr. Obed S. Johnson, head of the department of religion, spent six weeks of their summer vacation in western universities teaching graduate and undergraduate classes.

Brigance at U. S. C.

Dr. Brigance taught three courses in the summer session at the University of Southern California, two being undergraduate and one graduate. He stated that contrary to his expectations the average age of the students in the beginning speech class was higher than that in his graduate course. This seeming paradox was explained by the fact that the most of the students in the beginning class were superintendents

Eight Game Schedule Faced by Gridgers—Butler Here for Homecoming

Oct. 15—Evanston, away.
Oct. 22—Butler (Homecoming).

With the opening game of the 1932 season only a fortnight away, Head Coach Pete Vaughan and his assistants, Goldsberry and Paterson are laboring diligently to impart some semblance of a polish to the current edition of the Little Giants. Around 30 candidates answered the Scarlet mentor's initial call for tryouts, Friday, September 9.

At present, the backs and linemen are divided into two separate groups with the former being drilled in elementary backfield technique by Coach Lon Goldsberry, while the latter are receiving much individual attention in the fundamentals under Vaughan himself. Much time is being spent by both groups in practicing such simple but necessary formulas as blocking, tackling, passing, and numberable callisthenics which would include the pushup, knee bend, bicycle pedaling, and other exertions of a similar type.

Fourteen Lettermen Report

Although eligibility rulings and the current depression have played havoc with several of Wabash's leading hopes for the current year a total of 14 lettermen from the 1931 eleven were on hand for the first practice of the season a week ago. This group

KAPPA SIGS HOSTS TO FIRST FROSH SMOKER

President Hopkins Addresses Group—Anderson, Breeding ing Officiate

According to the usual custom, the first of the annual freshmen smokers was held last night at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house at 200 west College street. The meeting was featured by an address by President Louis B. Hopkins.

Hopkins Talks

President Hopkins extended the first official welcome to the members of the incoming class, and spoke briefly on the subject of "Wabash Spirit." He stated that the long life of the college has a great deal to do with the strengthening of the traditions and spirit that have become an integral part of the institution, and remarked on the congeniality and informality that symbolize the life at Wabash. Following the President's talk Paul Anderson, president of the Senior Council, announced the rule for freshman conduct and answered the question as to when "pots" are to appear on the campus.

Breeding Leads Cheers

Louis Breeding, cheer leader, instructed the new men in Wabash yells and songs. Those present received copies of both "Old Wabash" and "Alma Mater". In addition to these two, the chant and "When Wabash Rips Em' Up Again" were practiced.

WELCOME FRESHMEN

Registration now being completed, the rolls of the college show that over 130 freshman have joined the ranks of Wabash men. To these yearlings The Bachelor offers a few suggestions in regard to some of the Wabash customs, spirit and traditions.

Our school has, since its inception, been proud of the spirit constantly maintained in its student body. The enthusiasm of Wabash men has always supported the teams to the limit of their ability until they have well earned such titles as "Little Giants", "Cavemen", and the "Hell-Roar-in' Five Hundred". It is the duty of every member of the class of '36 to maintain and add to this incomparable spirit that Wabash College has always been known for.

More important than "college spirit" is the tradition of genuine scholarship that has always permeated the life of this institution. The freshman class is also expected to continue and add its bit to this tradition.

The life of a new student is not only purely one of unmixed pleasure, but it can be made replete with memories that will last throughout his life. The first year at college consists mainly in making new friends and making the adjustments necessary to the college life with its many differences from that in secondary schools.

But in the long run, when one looks back upon his college days, they generally stand out as one of the high spots of his life, never to be regretted, and never to be forgotten.

THE SCARLET

Wabash has but one color—The Scarlet. There are two interesting stories in connection with how Wabash got its color. One alumni group claims that the color was adopted because Scarlet is a color that "you can hear a-come." Another section tells another story, which has become traditional in the Wabash athletic department.

In 1886, the monthly Wabash magazine contained an article bewailing the fact that Wabash had no colors. A meeting was accordingly held in back of South Hall, in which all the students, including the football team, joined. The meeting was informal, and each suggested a color. Violet, rose, and yellow were suggested, and each in turn rejected. Things died down, and during the lull, a wee voice piped up:

"Why not heliotrope for the Wabash color?"

It was the last straw. A crippled student mounted a stump, waved an old scarlet sweater on one arm, and yelled,

"Heliotrope, hell; I want blood."

And the scarlet has been the Wabash color ever since.

LITTLE GIANTS

Although the famous name, "Little Giants," first came into general use in 1903, thanks to Walter Eckersall of The Chicago Tribune, the name had been applied to Scarlet athletic teams two years before.

Back in 1901, Wabash football and student support sank to a low ebb. After one particularly disheartening defeat, the Beloved Old Man of Wabash, then a mere infant on the faculty, was called to the stand in chapel. He delivered a stirring speech in which he termed the Wabash players "fighting little men."

Ralston Goss, the Crawfordsville correspondent for the Indianapolis Star, and later sports editor of that paper, took up the phrase and called Wabash the "good little men."

When Wabash walloped Indiana in 1908 by a shutout score, Ed Bingham, sports editor of the Indianapolis News, referred to Wabash as the Little Giants. Walter Eckersall, in telling of the game in which he played against Wabash with Chicago, said: "They tackled like Little Giants. I never saw such wholehearted, devil-may-care tackling." And the name has remained a loyal Wabash tradition.

CRAGGIE

Although he is absent from his beloved school, his fine courage and spirit still remain on the Scarlet campus and he maintains the title of "The Grand Old Man of Wabash." His favorite phrase, "Wabash Always Fights, and Fights Fairly," has done more for the spirit of Wabash teams than any other factor on the campus.

Wabash Customs

Most of the customs of Wabash College date back to the beginning of the institution in 1832. They are honored and respected by all Wabash men. It is the first duty of all new students to learn all the customs and to endeavor to respect them and live up to them in all ways.

Freshmen never smoke while on the campus. Non-observance of this rule will result in a free haircut at the hands of the Vigilance committee.

Men who have engaged in athletic and forensic contests are accorded the applause of the student body upon their first entrance into chapel following the contest.

All students touch their hats to members of the faculty and freshmen touch their caps to members of the senior class as well.

Only members of the senior class are allowed to sit upon the senior bench and only juniors may sit upon the junior fence.

No one except those students who have won letters or numerals in Wabash athletics are allowed to wear scarlet sweaters while in the city. Exceptions are yell leaders, student managers, and members of the band, at the time they are performing.

In leaving the chapel building the following order is observed: Seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshmen in order.

Freshmen always sit in the first three rows of bleachers at football and baseball games, and on the top three rows at basketball games.

He crushed her to his manly breast,
The color left her cheek,
But on the bosom of his vest,
The damned stuff stayed a week.

With that the colyum starts off with a bang to another highly successful year. Naturally, the staff wishes to take this opportunity to welcome and sympathize with the incoming freshman class. It certainly is a shame. However, from time to time in this colyum will be printed bits of weighty advice that are well worth while. Those which follow are the fundamental things a first year man should bear in mind throughout the semester.

Never drink beer in church.
Always pick out a seat reasonably near the front of the chapel.

Don't smoke a pipe while taking a shower.

Never pass out until a dance is at least half over.

Courtesy is a highly desirable phase in the character of a college man. Freshmen should cultivate courtesy, and use it to the fullest extent whenever possible, especially in the acknowledgement of a gift. As an example:

Dear Aunt Posey:
Thanks a million for the lovely watch you just sent me. The lousy thing won't run. How much did it cost you?

Your loving nephew,
HARRY.

And last for today, but not least, a rhynie pot is a thing to be worn on the head, and is not to be placed under the bed during rough week.

Wouldn't there be a lot of grey-haired freshmen if Andy ran around the campus shouting, "Boo".

Recent statistics have definitely proven that 90% of the students of Wabash college are normal, and the rest are connected in one way or another with the Chemistry Department.

Another thing around here that should have the clamps put on is the constant habit of a number of professors of sitting in the rear row during Chapel exercises and taking a nap. It's bad enough for the frosh to sit back there and pound them off, but when the stately providers of wisdom enter the realms of Morpheus why it's just too tough.

Ham Kelly, Swails and Gehle are back in town, for what good reason none can understand. Caille is also here, in the role of student emeritus. Rumor has it that he will soon get out that world's sharpest razor and start selling ham sandwiches.

Professor Carscallen is just back from a visit to the Olympics. Don't be surprised if he is reported hurdling the junior fence or is seen drawing diagrams of the disputed 5,000 meter race for his Algebra class.

Professors Brigrance and Paterson were also visitors at the Los Angeles games.

Using up space for this first issue gets rather tiresome. Maybe it might be a good idea to bring about a grand revival of the Mary poem. Here goes, bigger and better than ever:

Mary had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow,
And everywhere that Mary went
The little lamb

Would immediately follow the senior council, the French club, a delegation of local merchants, the baseball team, the entire Freshman class, the entire student body, the entire Sig Chi chapter, a couple of plumbers, Big Ben, the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, the Interstate Commerce Committee, and the Mayor of Chicago.

The news is just out that the enviable job of school barber is this year in the capable hands of Red LoFollette. It is suggested that all freshmen confer with Mr. LaFollette at the earliest convenience and discuss which type of haircut would most benefit them. Mr. LaFollette's predecessors have had a marked tendency toward the Maltese cross, but it is hoped that this year's tonsorial operator will branch out with something entirely new and original, like the Indian sign, the figure eight, of the very latest billiard ball effect. Well groomed freshmen are always desirable around a campus, especially when visitors are being shown about. After watching the newly appointed shear welder operate a hose at a little event last spring, it is the unanimous opinion of this colyumist that he will do all that is in his power to give to the Wabash campus the ultimate in tonsorial perfection.

There are not infrequent outbursts of linguistic and lethargic amusement afforded by these language clubs which go under the high-sounding names of Le Cercle Francais, Der Deutsche Verein, El Circulo Espanol, and The Latin, Greek, Italian, and Esperanto Literary Society. Your attendance at daily luncheons is invited.

Incidentally, it might be well for new students to get Phi Beta Kappa, Pi Delta Epsilon, Omega, Tau Kappa Alpha, Blue Key, Sphinx Club, "W" Men's Association, Alpha Pi, and the Wabash Centennial to give them a bid. Pledge pins may be secured by consulting the vigilance committee of the Senior Council, results to be tallied at a later date. It might also be a good plan not to.

Information and advice about the Scarlet Masque, The Wabash, The Bachelor, The Caveman, The Press Club, The Publications Board, The New Bureau, International Relations Club, Band, Orchestra, Senior Study Camp, and Bank Cigar Store may be left to your own judgement and discretion.

Traction and bus schedules may be secured at your local dealer with absolutely no cost or obligation to yourself, friends, or family.

Every new student will sooner or later be given a chants to learn "Yea Ho, Yea Ho," and the Maine Stein Song.

Should any freshman (paging Mr. Angell) desire any further information concerning Wabash customs and costumes, he may consult Gen. E. Knutz, official college information bureau advisor, at any hour between 9 a. m. and 9 p. m. at Forest Hall. Bring your own cigarettes and a new copy of Ballyhoo for anything out of the ordinary which might arise on the spur of the moment.

Ho Hum!

An Appreciation

For the past seven or eight years, countless Wabash students have paused between classes to refresh themselves at what has become a firmly established institution on the campus—Mrs. Streibich's. Always a friend to the college, a splendid mother to her own sons, and an understanding counsellor to the Wabash student body, Mrs. Streibich has become an indispensable part of a college education at Wabash. How many "rhynies" have enjoyed her hospitality during the trying days of rough week no one will ever know, but rest assured that they will never forget. Thanks to you, Mrs. Streibich, for making us a better generation of Wabash men.

HERE'S LUKE-ING AT YOU!

By Luke White

As Bachelor neophytes soon learn all newspaper articles must in the first paragraph provide the answer to the —W— questions: Who, When, Where, Why, and How. Therefore:

Who—by ye feature editor whose name may be ascertained by various methods, the best of which is to look on page two and read up from the bottom of the editorial column.

When—every week, barring too many bull-sessions.

Where—from the tenth to the twelfth sheets, inclusive, counting up from the bottom of the waste basket.

Why—because only seven out of ten knowingly inhale. If they all know they inhaled we might sell the whole paper to the cigarette companies.

How—by the grace of the gods and Jeff Auer with the special permission of the copyright owners.

Proceeding to the unoriginal subject from which we have been so easily side-tracked; what is rare as the centennial of Wabash College? Wrong again; it is not the blooming of the Plantis Centurati (Italics Mine). It is the presence of football material at the home of the Little Giants. In glaring headlines we read:

TWENTY-FOUR MEN REPORT FOR FOOTBALL AT WABASH

It is regrettable that football practice should start the same week that there is a full moon. Too many Cavemen are deserting football for easier and more enjoyable stuggles. Perhaps if Ingalls field were a cherry orchard the football squad would be larger.

If this story must have a feature let it be Pete Vaughan, the only man that ever made a touchdown through a goal post. To the freshman class we introduce this coach and man, who can remember when the Little Giants did their playing in sweating and not in tuxedos, when an offside play was punished with a five yard penalty and not a slap.

Howard, Plummer, and Baker New Faculty Members

Three new men have been added to the faculty for the current school year. They are R. B. Howard, J. C. Plummer, and W. Baker. They will take the place of E. Z. Groves, W. W. Crawford, and T. G. McCormick.

Mr. Howard takes the place of Groves, who has gone to Kansas City, Missouri, as instructor in physics in a private school. Mr. Plummer will act as alumni secretary and teach one course in freshman English. Mr. Plummer was editor of the Wabash last year, and took second place in the national oratorical contest in 1931. Mr. Baker will work as an assistant in the division of Biological science.

Howard and Plummer are Wabash graduates, the former in the class of 1929 and the latter in last year's class. Baker is a graduate of DePauw, and has since done graduate work at the University of Chicago.

observations among the stars gained international recognition as an astronomer.

The observatory building was moved under the direction of Mr. Lebo. The dome and walls were each cut into four pieces, and then transported by truck to Crawfordsville, where they were re-assembled. The telescope was demounted by Lester Lenover of Danville, who machined the parts before setting it up in its present location. Since it was set up, it has been in the process of adjustment under the direction of Professor George Horton, professor of Physics, and Professor George Carscadden, professor of Mathematics.

HOOVER APPOINTS GREEN TO HIGH LEGAL POSITION

Wabash Man Succeeds to District Attorneyship in Chicago Region

Recent appointment by President Hoover made Dwight H. Green, Wabash ex-'19, U. S. District Attorney in Chicago. Green received prominence in the recent trial of Al Capone upon charges of evading the federal income tax, and in recognition of his work was advanced to the post formerly held by George E. Q. Johnson, recently appointed to the federal bench in the northern district of Illinois.

Entering Wabash in the fall of 1915, Green became a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, and achieved considerable reputation from the quarterback position in the Scarlet backfield which he held his sophomore year.

Leaving Wabash to join the army, Green entered the Chicago university law school at the close of the war, and was admitted to the bar in 1922. In 1926 he was appointed as special attorney for the bureau of international revenue, became assistant to the district attorney in 1927, and in 1932, at the age of thirty-five was raised to his new post.

Enlisted in the army air force as second lieutenant, Green later became instructor at Kelley Field, Texas. In addition to his law work at the University of Chicago, where he obtained his Ph. D., Green also took work at Leland Stanford University immediately following his discharge.

made for the use of the telescope, but Professors Horton and Carscadden said that some schedule would be worked out whereby there will be open nights for all college students who care to see the telescope in action. It will not be ready for public inspection, however, until final adjustments are made and the mirror is re-silvered.

ON THE ADVANTAGES OF BEING A POOR STUDENT

By Jim Harney

Author's Note: This is not a humorous article. The writer attempted to make such of it, but after a certain amount of pain and misery, the idea was given up. In case you are interested, this is a dissertation on a serious problem which confronts the students and faculty of our beloved institution.

Not long ago, I was walking through the campus with one of the so-called "smart guys" of our beloved institution. During the course of our trek across the greensward we met George Valentine. I proceeded to spiel off the usual greetings to the Dean, getting a smile and a "Howdy, Jim," but during the procedure I noticed that my companion only nodded to Kendall and received the same sort of indifferent greeting in return. This situation sort of puzzled me, and set my great and noble brain to working.

Now the man with whom I was jaunting across the campus is at the present writing a senior and "potential Phi Bete." Although he may not be the most prominent man on the campus, (sometimes called B. M. O. C. I believe), still he seemed to be well liked. Now just what was it that caused him to be stamped "unknown" by our well-known Dean.

I proceeded to cross examine the witness. When asked whether or not he knew the "Dink", he replied, "only casually."

This was enough to knock my hat off. (Here I had been hearing for years, too numerous to mention, the line about Wabash's advantages because of a small student body—the intimacy between professor and student-administration and undergraduate.) But because I didn't have any hat to be knocked off, I went on with my inquiry.

"Haven't you ever been in to see him—weren't you ever on the carpet?"

"No," he responded, "I've never had that pleasure."

"My Gawd," I thought, "certainly here is the ideal student."

Upon further inquiry I found that he knew none of the dear old profs intimately. No, he was not a "straw" as some of us usually class Phi Betes. (You will notice I said some. Hows that for getting out of a tight situation? I would hate to offend Brigg.) Unfortunately, he had not acquired that tactful but sometimes gripeing habit of jaunting up to the prof's desk after class to ask some silly question, not to find the answer, but to get on "easy street" with said pedagogue.

But all this cogitation was not bringing me an answer to this weighty problem. This deplorable situation, which I had uncovered while merely strolling through the campus, had not as yet been interpreted clearly in my all too dull mind. I was still mystified by the fact that not one, but evidently, many gents on the campus weren't even on intimate enough terms with the dean to call him by name, when said personage confronted them on the street. "By the great horn spoon", though I "this problem deserve careful consideration."

After two packs of cigarettes and numerous rotten cokes had been inhaled in "ye well known hangout," a brilliant idea dawned upon my miraculous skull—the answer to my weighty problem finally began to sink into my thick cranium, and believe me, brother, the revelation was painful.

At first, I thought perhaps I was looking at the situation from a biased angle. Because of my great and ignoble prominence along conversational lines, (most people call it plain bull) I thought that perhaps I had come to know "the powers that are" in this man's school better than most of the boys. I soon dismissed this idea with the thought that there were others on the campus who could also throw a line of bull, although, by a campus straw vote, I had been awarded the honor of being the "Bull Durhamist buller" on the campus.

But this running off at the mouth is not solving the problem at hand.

My contention concerning this affair runs thusly: There surely must be some compensation for being a maverick or outcast as I have come to be on this campus. It sometimes is an effort to be a poor student, and, although some would have us believe otherwise, it seems to be an honor to graduate with as little work as possible. (Just think of the Derby). Of course, it is much more of an honor to be a member of Phi Beta Kappa, or some such organization, but on the other hand there turns up the other extreme. If one can't be a Phi Bete, he can at least work for some other honor, such as being the worst student in college or the most troublesome fellow in the institution. I seem to have aquired both these latter monickers, and it is to this fact that I attribute my renown with members of the illustrious faculty, especially the dean.

Have you ever stopped to think how satisfying it is to sit in the dean's office and shoot the bull, perhaps smoking one of his lousy Camels? (Pardon me, Mr. Reynolds, or Libby?) But to get back to the thought at hand, it was always a great satisfaction to me while in school (old grad stuff,) to sit in Kendall's office and while away the time while others were nervously waiting outside the door (there are too many 'whiles' in that sentence aren't there, Hutsy?). The more students there were outside the door the better I liked it. Nothing pleased me more than to receive disgusted glances and scowling looks as I took my bow and exited from Valentine's office. It was such a great feeling of triumph and superiority. Of course I never let them know the grief and pain I suffered while in that awful den of iniquity, which has written on its door the letters, "DEAN, please knock before entering."

But, hold on a minute, that isn't the only advantage of being a worthless whelp. There are many more reasons why most of the profs know us worthless ones by our first names, which seems to be a distinction which even some Phi Betes cannot gain.

I well remember how, during my rhynie year, I learned that Osborne had a fancy for Westbrook Pegler and his philosophies. How did I find that out? Well, I started in to be a rotten student rather early. During my first month in college, I got behind in my essay work, as you will probably well understand after having suffered with me thus far, and it was during one of Insley's reprimanding sessions with me that I learned of Westbrook and Company.

Well do I remember during my sophomore year, (my Gawd, what a hectic year it was) how Monty in one of his off moments, while trying to pound some Deutsch into my head before an ex, let the fact slip that he was very fond of good ol' German beer. Now I associated with Prof. Montgomery quite a bit, largely because of my liking for the clay court game, but who would have thought that I could find out about his fancy for beer. And I wouldn't have, chances are if I hadn't been behind in my German.

So you see, I hope, that there are some, in fact, numerous advantages in being a troublesome reprobate, for whom no one in the college seems to have much use. And my ability to fill this role of the reprobate, I believe, is largely responsible for my wide acquaintance with members of our renowned faculty. Which thought, incidentally, solves the weighty problem with which I was confronted while "treking across the greensward."

(If you have been so kind as to bear with me throughout this — I don't know what to name it,—I feel sorry for you, one and all. Next time you will know better.)

STRINGENT RULING MADE ON CIGARETTE SMOKING

Senior Council President Points to Fire Insurance Rulings

Announcement has been made of an important ruling regarding smoking by P. E. Anderson, president of the Senior Council, to the effect that no smoking will be permitted in any of the college buildings. No cigarettes will be tolerated in the corridors in classrooms, not only on account of the disorderly appearance of cigarette stubs strewn about, but also because it violates fire insurance laws. The ban on smoking in any of the building interiors should do much to create a better atmosphere befitting such an institution as Wabash.

This ruling will have no effect upon the present smoking privileges on the campus, granted to all upper-classmen. The yearlings must do their smoking outside of the campus confines.

of schools or principals who had found a knowledge of the fundamentals of speaking a decided asset in their line of work. The average age of the students in the beginning class was thirty-five. One of the students in the graduate course was Lloyd Dudley, Wabash '29, who is working on his masters degree in speech. He was a former student of Dr. Brigrance during his undergraduate days at Wabash.

The classes at the University of Southern California ended on July 29 in time for the instructors and students to attend the Olympic games.

Johnson Teaches at Utah

Dr. Johnson taught two courses at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, where he had taught during the summer of 1929. The courses were "Three Basic Religions of China" and "The Chinese Revolution." Dr. Johnson is particularly qualified to teach such courses due to his fifteen years of experience living in China.

After the session at the University of Utah, Dr. Johnson went to Asilomar, California, where he attended a young peoples conference and taught eighty students in two classes. The classes were "Christianity" and "The Crisis in the Far East." Leaving Asilomar, he proceeded to Los Angeles where he attended the Olympics and then to San Diego, where he visited for a short while before returning to Crawfordsville.

Others Attend Olympic

Two other Wabash professors were among those present at the Olympic games; Professor Carscallen and Professor Paterson. Professor Carscallen drove to Los Angeles via Salt Lake City with his wife and son. Professor Paterson visited during the games with relatives in Los Angeles.

PUBLICATIONS CHIEFS ANNOUNCED BY BOARD

Board of Publications Names Cole and Rhodehamel to Head Annual

George K. Cole was elected to the post of editor of the yearbook at the last meeting of the Publication Board, with Robert Rhodehamel heading the business staff of the same publication. Heading the editorial of the Cave-man, campus comic publication, is John Acklemire. Business manager chosen by the board was William Burroughs.

At the next meeting of the board, to be held within another week, the post of Director of the News Bureau will be filled. At that time the vacancy left by Walter Thornton as editor of The Bachelor will also be filled. Homer Curtis has already been selected to handle the business affairs of the weekly paper.

Football Veterans in Initial Practice of Season

Includes Varner, Stew Smith, Peterson, Meese, Kutz, and Robbins, backs; Powers, Riker, Nelson, Vinroot, Wrona, Beaman, Milam, Mueller, and Snoddy, linemen. While it is too early yet to determine a definite lineup for the initial game of the fall against Franklin October 1, the following probable lineup from the standpoint of experience seems likely: ends, Vinroot and Wrona; tackles, Milam and Riker; guards, Mueller and Nelson; center, Powers; quarterback, Stew Smith; halfbacks, Varner and Underwood; fullback, Peterson.

An eight game schedule with representative teams in both Indiana and Ohio has been arranged for the Cave-men this fall commencing with the strong Franklin team October 1 and closing with Wabash's traditional rival DePauw at Greencastle November 19. The complete card embraces games with Rose Poly, Evansville, Butler, Miami, Cincinnati, Danville, and DePauw. With the memory of last year's 27 to 14 defeat still smarting, the current Wabash cast is more than anxious to atone for the setback their predecessors received in 1931.

The complete roster of varsity football candidates are as follows:

NEW INSTRUMENTS IN ORCHESTRA AND BAND

Montgomery Announces Two Orchestra Programs in October Celebration

With a number of new pieces and several new instruments, Professor Henry C. Montgomery, director of the college band and orchestra, is looking forward to a highly successful year for both organizations. Although several outstanding men from last year's group are missing, there is more than an abundance of material among the new men to offset the loss.

New Pieces Ordered

Professor Montgomery has already ordered several new marches for the band, and expects to start practice as soon as they arrive. New pieces are also in order for the orchestra, and negotiations are being made for the purchase of a bass violin to strengthen the string section of the organization.

To Play at Centennial

An unusual opportunity is in store for the orchestra this year, in that it will provide the music for two evenings of the centennial program in October. All new men who are interested in either the band or the orchestra are invited to get in touch with Professor Montgomery at his office in the basement of the new chapel.
